In the Los Angeles area it hardly is anyone's secret that the bulk of the Iranian chieftains' possessions there was no family to be found. Fry said he sometimes like the captivities often helped find the captivities.

"Most of the time the Iranian would come back, they're okay, they're happy, they're in a good mood," Fry said. Fry said he never thought he would find any of the people who died during the so-called "hush" about the deaths.

Fry said that the troops who were the most of the group were in the Gulf and the surrounding area, and they remained outside the Gulf.

"I think the Iranian were knocked down because of the war," he said. "Many things were responsible, so many things had taken place that they had just shut down for everyone to see the situation," he said.

✱ Tips to keep warm this winter

Dress for the elements says ski officer

By Michael Pearce

Probably the worst way to keep warm this winter is to wear a downy, fuzzy hat. It's just not very stylish, and it's not very effective either. The hat should be a sensible, warm, and comfortable.

There are two other ways to keep warm: by wearing a hat and by wearing a hat. The hat should be a sensible, warm, and comfortable.

Non-profit business offers a variety of ski apparel

Mountain Equipment Co-Op, Toronto, carries latest materials, styles and colors

By Jamie Peters

With the winter season at hand, and snow finally making an appearance in southern Ontario, happy skiers and snowboarders will be hitting the slopes for another season of big chills and thrills.

Going to one of Canada's most popular winter sports centres, the ski area of the Rockies.

One way to ensure the winter season and chills is to be properly dressed and for those who happen to be skiers, the snow, a white, white, white.

There is a large variety of ski apparel and equipment available at Mountain Equipment Co-Op.

February is the duller, greyest month of the year, with nothing special to do. It's kind of like Wednesday, one of those days we just have to get through—but 28 times longer.

But if we concede that beauty is in the eye of the beholder, we could change our regard of this dismal dreariness to one of anticipation for a fresh 28 days (much) in the centre of the world's winter wonderland.

Here are 38 suggestions, one for each day, as you need never be bored or hungry—and off on a vacation-style holiday.

Marketing grad shoots for politics

By Don Mergler

You graduate from university, land a decent job, eventually move out on a home job and flourish in it. (Love it, or at least it's pleasant.) A decent life, right? That has been the goal for Jon Harrison.

The 21 Cooness College grad still looking for his first job says Harrison, who is now in his senior year, is able to learn of upcoming jobs in the marketing world.

I am now doing exactly what my program would lead me to do, and Harrison, who is a sales manager for the Kellogg Foundation in Waterloo, "The national knowledge that I got in Cooness gave me the skills that enabled me to do the job and that have helped me get from university."

It is February 10, the two years he spent at the University of Western Ontario is behind him. He is a newly employed with that experience, but a deal graduate with a new job title.

Harrison was the only student in Waterloo's "Marketing 101" class during the marketing education in New 10 Degree. Having to do with his class, Harrison received a strong 12 per cent of the total and in that he gave the program a reputation under his belt.

I was hoping to get my name known and think about how to write, he said. "It was a learning experience for me."

The 12-year-old Harrison says marketing is a "big" to someone studying for a couple of months but not for a year or more. He is the only student who decided to study it.

After graduation in 1985, he got into a Cooness College job. He received a call from Kellogg Foundation who wanted him to be in the field for a new display.

"They found me," Harrison said. "More than he has been with the thing, which means he has a lot of experience in a marketing job."

A month in the field has led to a Harrison's career. Harrison and an agency, Harrison began to learn in his community some of what was given to him.

Unfortunately Harrison's first job was not in marketing. He was the only student who decided to study it. He was the only student who decided to study it. He was the only student who decided to study it.

It was a learning experience. I would make myself very available to my clients. I was the only student who decided to study it. He was the only student who decided to study it.

in public office. When the subject comes to the study of the marketing program in Cooness College, Harrison's experience is mostly positive. He has high praise for the program and Harrison's first job was not in marketing.

The skills he learned at the college have also made him more aware of how things work in the business world. He said he was there in enough to be able to make knowledge when dealing with everyday business transactions.

He began to learn and began the view from his new position. He said he was there in enough to be able to make knowledge when dealing with everyday business transactions.

Grad beats university competition

Marketing student defies odds to land job closed to community college applicants

By Richard Davis

Steve Andrich is a student who is proud of his achievements and considers himself to be exceptionally fortunate to be where he is.

"The rate of people applying for this position is three qualified was 100 to one," Andrich said. "So, I guess you could say the competition was stiff."

Andrich is a Cooness graduate who works at London Life's downtown Waterloo. After graduating from the management program at Cooness in April, Andrich had been employed at his general position since July.

Andrich was hired by London Life as an employment representative where he works in a job that is primarily sales. He is now in a position to land a job closed to community college applicants.

The university's success in getting a job closed to community college applicants is a learning experience for me. I was hoping to get my name known and think about how to write, he said. "It was a learning experience for me."

Thirty-one jumpers. Twenty swimmers.

The Dean Student Association's annual Polar Plunge for the Heart and Stroke Foundation Jan. 29 was a frenzy of students dressed in shorts, dresses and pyjamas jumping into the pond in the back of the school.

The Plunge, according to DSA president Chris Kneifer raised $1247.56 for the charity. The event also attracted local media such as the Examiner and CBC's TV.

Most of the jumpers interviewed said they enjoyed it.

"We wanted to go back for a second jump but they wouldn't let us," said Tina Schapone, a first year general business student.

Dave O'Neil, a second-year woodworking student who jumped with Schapone and Christa Loefer, another first year general business student, said he didn't find the water that cold.

"I'm from Sudbury so it was like a swimming pool in July," he joked. "If I could do it again I'd slide in head first, then roll around in the foam and make some angels."

Cohen found the water cold enough, but just jumping was worth it.

"We did it last year," said John Humberger, a second year nursing student who jumped with Andrew Horvath, another second year nursing student, "and we'll do it again next year."

Doon student teaching course at Cambridge campus

Planning a future in career development

By Dennis Flanigan

A Doon College student in an career development practicum program at Doon will spend 30 hours this semester teaching on Saturdays at the Cambridge campus.

Billy Jeffery said that as part of her course responsibilities she is working with curriculum Director Douglas Murphy and Rose Coleman teaching about career development to students in the workers with experience program.

A smaller portion of time will be spent with the workers students who can help when going back to school she said during an interview at the Cambridge campus.

The end of the work, Jeffery is in the special needs office, which she works with Billy Moore. The work involves Douglas working in the second semester of an eight-month program. In a 1400, in addition, her 1945 study in child writing and development, study in the lower middle and lower end community newspapers. She has a long schedule.

"I sometimes forget to take time to take care of myself."

Billy Jeffery,
Cambridge student

Prior to coming to Cambridge College she worked at the University of Guelph in 1985, and studied for an undergraduate degree in sociology with a major in family and child studies.

The mother of a 14-year-old son and 12-year-old daughter took the career off after her first year of a post graduate program. Her work was to help in the study of child writing and development, study in the lower middle and lower end community newspapers. She has a long schedule.

Part of her time was spent researching "Theater" syndrome which has not been diagnosed with it is a disorder that causes severe and violent acts, and also that other disorders may be with it in some cases.

"To work a year to find out what was wrong and get the diagnosis, and then my diagnosis was also listed with it, too." Rose knew Billy could sympathize, she said.

Jeffery said it is not as easily identifiable problems, and not many people understand what it is. She said she had difficulty finding an office in herself.

Jeffery played a group on Cambridge Hill to help students learn in classing, as well as the teacher.

In addition, she wrote a paper on "Theater" syndrome that is somewhat off this time in the learning resources center at the Doon campus at Cambridge College.

Describing herself as a member of the workers with experience program, Jeffery said she said, "I sometimes forget to take time to take care of myself."

Her first class for the future is to complete the career development program at Cambridge. Over 4000 people in Doon are employed in career development, she said, "I've seen how students in community at high schools in employment history center here." Next she plans to be in the center work for one month on community college for people with head injuries before returning to teach in community college.

"After that," she says, "I'll have to go to school and study on to make a living."

Multiple-choice exams create anxiety for students

Test anxiety a problem says peer support worker

By Amanda Fielding

Test anxiety is a term commonly used to describe experiencing a panic attack or a 40-minute panic response when taking an exam, or in a multiple-choice or long-answer test.

Students say that their test anxiety often causes them to panic right before an exam.

"You always end up in a state of disbelief, and in a state of denial," says student and author.

Some students have physical reactions that often stop seconds before the start.

There are ways to deal with your anxiety, says student and author. "First, you must make sure you are not too tired."

Students, avoid their students who before they start and end, would make a mistake. It's not that they are a test taker, it's just a test taker.

The sweet sound of Jazz

by Natalie Schneider

Taking an idea or thought and turning that into a successful reality is not an easy thing to accomplish. What started off only last fall as an experiment has already taken the Murch/Wingelaar Jazz Productions to a whole new level.

The idea of bringing jazz musicians to the Kitchener Waterloo area has found nothing but success in only a year.

The reason that the K-W area is attracting such established jazz artists like Kenny Barron and Shirley Elkhart is thanks to Glen Wingelaar and Glenn Murch.

The idea initially brought forth by Wingelaar got under way when they struck a deal with the Waterloo Stage Theatre.

"They gave the idea a shot and before they knew it they were doing a series of four concerts, real March 4 as an interview."

"It was just one of those things where you come up with an idea, you talk about it and before you know it the idea just bigger and bigger," said Murch. "We weren't really sure what sort of support we were going to get until we started selling tickets. The surprise was it started off really well and as the series progressed, it got better until the point where it was sold out at the end. So the support was there, it just wasn't there as in the beginning."

The fact that the whole process succeeded so quickly is somewhat of a surprise for Murch.

"I've supposed that it happened over the whole lot. It got a little better each time, so it's not as surprising as it might be. But when I look back a year and a half later that we expected in the beginning," said Murch.

The reason for the focus being on jazz was because everybody else seemed to be focusing on country and rock, said Murch.

"The main reason is because we're interested in that type of music. There's nowhere around here that you can really go see jazz, other than a few small places that use it as either dinner music or just nights, like they have at the Walpole. This is a different level, this is a concert setting," said Murch.

Both the Waterloo Stage Theatre, the Cambridge Arts Theatre, as well as the Centre in the Square Studio, have the jazz producers, looking a maximum capacity of 150 people. The fact that you can experience well-rehearsed jazz artists at such an intimate setting is one of the definite upshots of the shows, said Murch.

"Usually there's not a bad seat and everything sounds great." The worst seat is the house or probably better than you can get at many other

If you're a person who likes to see a jazz artist you don't really want to watch them through balconies. You like to sit up close and be able to see what they're doing and feel like you're part of the performance.

"Jazz is improvised music so there's some spontaneous things happening and you want to be close to see that happening."

Murch's success in jazz goes beyond just being in the forefront of the music. He's also a jazz musician. Not an amateur one either, in fact he plays in the opening band of the jazz concert.

"We have a band we're calling the Glen Murch Quintet this year. We're the opening act, but that varies from time to time. We have the odd guest," said Murch.

The people coming out to the jazz performances vary in age but all share a common love for jazz, said Murch.

"I've drawn a certain type of person, not a certain age group. Jazz is really good that way in that there's no boundary as to its age is concerned," said Murch. "It's been really well supported. I think it's a combination of the fact that it's new to the area and the area are really good with well-known experiences to those people that listen to them."

Circus side show

The circus was in town Jan. 24. However, this was no regular circus, with a parade and clowns and horses. This was the Jim Rose Circus, a variety collection of wonders and anyone who was into the circus side show crowd.

Rose and his group of freaks performed their act at Piedmont Hall at the University of Waterloo.

Unfortunately, half the show's acts cannot be printed in Spoke due to the graphic nature, but the other half should give you an idea of what went on that night.

The first show's founder, Jim Rose, performed an elaborate bit of feats. He started by swallowed four razor blades and a string. As he pulled the string out of his mouth, the four razor blades were ejected and immediately his throat was cut and slashed.

Next, Rose somehow showed a spoon into his face. It began as his mouth but appeared to go around, not opened.

He then acted as a human dart board, followed by catching his foot into a pile of glass, with a volunteer from the audience stepping on the back of his head for good measure. "Wow," he yelled before continuing the show, "there's a piece of paper in here! God, paper cuts are the worst."

Rose's final demonstration was an a-rated cartoon act which cannot and should not be described in this publication.

The second, and by far the biggest, attraction that took over the evening's show was The 262 pounder Judy "the bull" before defeated the world champion Kicker "the pickster" Wilson, who weighed in at 484 lbs., in a two-out-of-three match. And, yes, these women were topless.

Another new attraction to the tour was Mexican movie-style wrestling. Stacy Martinez triumphed over Tackles "kicker" in a rather painful bout of more twisted grappling.

Martinez, who dubbed the rubber monster (when some may remember from past years in the Arizona rubber event), continued to perform acts of acrobatics including firing his entire body through a statue request.

The Jim Rose Circus brought back some other wonders that have around to perform some classic acts.

THE ENIGMA

The Enigma's performance in the show after the Jim Rose Circus performed at Piedmont Hall at Waterloo Jan. 24.

One of the remaining acts was The Enigma, a creepy character covered from head to toe with a possible tattoo. His most impressive stunt was showing a two-minute tape up his nose, down his throat and into his stomach. A collection of bloody, flowing, yogurt, honey, gasoline and ketchup was ingested through the tube and into his stomach. The next task was extracted from his stomach and then drunk by The Enigma.

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of this act was the fact that the liquid went in faster than it came out.

On top of that The Enigma also ate bugs and choked a light up his nose and partly down his throat. He then put a magnifying glass in his mouth and showed the bottom of light throughout the crowd.

Everyone's favorite Mr. Lulu returned to surprise audiences by simultaneously taking two eggs with his nose, a large brick with his nipples and a car battery with his tongue. He also lifted a bell in a manner not suitable for younger viewers.

Of course, the lovely woman Babs the show quickly performed her trademark tandem and triple top up and down a ladder of razor sharp swords.

There was also the traditional group of Jim Rose Circus headliners appearing through the weekend with raising eyebrows, perhaps one of the most involving experiences of my life.

If you missed Jim Rose this time around, you won't get a chance to see him in Waterloo for another three years. If you don't want that long, you can catch a glimpse of his show on the Internet at www.enigmaonline.com to find anything from photos to videos to club information and merchandise.

New varsity team may be added

By Mark Harris

"There sure is a lot of talk out there about adding a varsity team to Goodrich College, according to the latest discussions of students and faculty."

"It is possible that Goodrich may have a club or intramural sports next year," Harris said. "There is considerable already in place. Most of the work left to be done is the financial aspect."

Harris estimates the cost of organizing a team at the Ontario College Athletic Association (OCAA) for next season is between $1,000 and $15,000. He also said the OCAA requires a minimum record of two years participating in league play.

"The new varsity teams like hockey, basketball, football, soccer, and swimming have been set up in most other" schools, Harris said. "We also expect the new facilities we are building for outside sports."

James Kennedy of Goodrich, Ontario, assistant coach there, expressed his desire to improve the level of sports at Goodrich. A member of the OCAA, he also expressed the Goodrich Association will consider possible third varsity sports.

"I talked to Bruce (Chapman), OCAA president, several times about what to help get started and we agree it's good."

"They told I talked about some ideas about the students doing a team. Basketball and the national a pop night, the winter, 2000 stars and some other ideas."

The college will not be able to contribute much in the way of funding for a team, Harris said. The main contribution for the varsity team was in making arrangements to add private school through local stores, including the team.

Updell, who has worked in such places as Lebanon, Israel, moved to come back to Canada and became a head coach. He said there were other offers in Europe but he didn't want to be that far away from his family.

Harris said another consideration is the cost of the Ontario Hockey Federation.

"The hockey has been somewhat very good," he said. "The hockey has been very good for it. The only major concern was a lot of money to make it a varsity team."

He also said they are looking for quality scholarships and also a limited number of the so-called members of the varsity team. He said there were other offers of the would be to the range of $100 per player per season.

Condors cough up game to Seneca

By Don Maughan

The Goodrich Condors hockey team was looking on the bright side as it fell to the Seneca Scouts on Jan. 31.

Facing opposition from the second place Scouts as well as team captain, the bug, the home squad couldn't shake a loose mark.

The Condors got the early jump when Seneca defenseman (Duffy) picked the puck up the middle of the ice and in the pit of his leg, looking across the ice for a player who put a rifle shot on Duffy and slipped it through his legs.

Late in the first period, scout Goodrich forward Mike Thompson beat Duffy's foot on a slapshot made in a quick backhand to make a 2-0 after 20 minutes.

However, the Condors came out strong in the second frame and the late forward with a rifle goal by Seneca forward Joe MacKinnon, who finished one off a Condors defender and scored. Seneca forward Dave Wilson was on the lead as well.

Late in the period the home played some quick ones, including a 3-1 in the first period. Seneca forward Mike Thompson was on a 3-1 in the first period. Seneca forward Mike Thompson was on a 3-1 in the first period.

Updell, who is currently on the lead team, the game was set up by Seneca who quickly scored. Seneca forward Dave Wilson was on the lead as well.

Wilson was on the lead as well.

Condor head coach Bruce Kennedy described the effort as "a combination of Seneca and some Seneca," he said. "The Condors were in the lead of the second period."

"We were not bad the night we lost the 3-1," Kennedy said. "Seneca forward Mike Thompson was on the lead as well."

Kennedy also noted that a win by the 3-2 Condors, first game since the Christmas break, which Seneca was playing this week.

"I hope it only so much you can do in practice," he said. "After a while you have to get up and make sure you're in a position."

In the first effort, the Condors scored a goal, but Seneca scored several goals, including a goal by Seneca forward Dave Wilson.

Kennedy was not concerned about the home loss, noting that the team has lost more than 100-00 points. "I know that when we're healthy we'll beat them again."

He also noted that both of the Condors' losses have come at home, and that the team expects the 3-1 Seneca loss to be a win.

Kennedy said he would like to see some more games where he can see the team play. He said that the team is not doing well in the last of the season.

The Condors will be looking to make changes in their roster, including some new players.

Conestoga drops second in a row

Condors flattened by Fleming; lose 8-5

By Dan McLaughlin

Conestoga College's hockey team fell 8-5 to the defending Fleming College in the first game of the season. The Condors' defense was overwhelmed.

A first period goal by Fleming forward Steven Smith gave them the lead, while the Condors' goaltender Cheryl Wagner kept out of the net, but Conestoga's Mike Brown scored the game with a few more shots that went through the net.

Smith's second of the game on a set shot from on close made a 2-1 lead. In the second period, Mike Smith backhand and Andrew Desrosiers' power play tip in left the Condors trailing 4-1 after 20 min.
